

Tim Fair is an artist with a deep and passionate appreciation for beauty in the natural world and the human form. This enthusiasm and joy is reflected strongly in his artwork. His work is executed in a vibrant, abstracted style, which - while still retaining its representational roots. He works mainly in mixed media including collage, spray paint and acrylic.

As a young man, Tim travelled throughout Africa, Scandinavia and Europe trying his hand at a dizzying number of careers. Nothing truly resonated however, until his passion for painting was re-kindled whilst living in Andalucía, Spain . In 2001 at 26 years of age he embarked on an intensive four-year period of study and painting that was to change his life forever.

Since that time, Tim's love of the outdoors and creating expressive paintings has manifested recently into the development of a wide range of landscape paintings although he has undertaken numerous commissions for portraits. Tim's work has appeared in various exhibitions and has been collected by international buyers.

Currently Tim divides his time between painting and as a high school art teacher He has helped to develop young people's artistic skills and appreciation of the arts in a very successful art department.

Tim is currently living and working in Norwich, Norfolk where he maintains his studio.
